

I am very concerned about the interference potential of broadband over the telephone network. I do not see the neessity for it, since DSL is available nearly everywhere and is fast and affordable (I have it and am quite happy with it). As you can tell from my e-mail address, I am an amateur radio operator. Emergency communications will be adversely affected by this unlicensed interefering service, not just amateur radio, but everything else in the HF-low VHF spectrum. Thank you for your consideration.
